Austen Humphries, Director, Rattling stick, London

Austen Humphreys is a man of unbelievable stories. Quite literally. His proudest moments include playing bowls for England, meeting the Queen, and surviving a shootout in a Brazilian favela (one of those is a lie). He cut his teeth in post-production at the Mill; immersing himself in the dark arts of post-production whilst working alongside directors as a VFX Supervisor. Through his work, Austen found he wanted to understand the industry from another side, and made the leap over to Rattling Stick. His first commercial was for Swatch Watches, which he describes as being “a vomit-inducing rollercoaster ride, whilst laughing my head off in equal measure” – a feeling he still gets to this day. His inaugural project very swiftly led to more work for Swatch, followed by TFL, News International, Sky, Nokia, Nike, Suzuki and most recently eMoov, Smooth Radio & Betstars.

Olivia Atkins

Olivia Atkins is the News Reporter at shots, a publication that covers creativity in global advertising. Since joining the company just over a year ago, she has written predominantly online – writing news pieces and conducting interviews with some of the great brains of adland. But she also occasionally writes for the magazine and most recently, was lucky enough to go on a work trip to document the Scandic creative culture. She's always on the lookout for the next new idea and is also keen to feature young talent. Prior to the role, she worked in various sectors – including travel, national and financial news – none of which felt quite right, but she finally feels at home working in the creative industry.

Rogier van der Ploeg

Rogier van der Ploeg is a comedy director based in New York City and Amsterdam. His spots have won Clio, Gold Lions, and the Grand Prix at Cannes for the famous Rolo commercial. You know, the one with the elephant. He co-founded Czar in 1990, a European commercial production company based in Holland, Belgium, France and Germany, and a former winner of the Cannes Palme d'Or. He's directed Super Bowl spots for Budweiser and Nabisco, as well as commercials for mega-brands like Coca-Cola, Kraft, Miller Lite, Chevy, Chrysler, Sprint and Pepsi. Rogier holds casting in the highest regard and is known for drawing hilarious performances out of celebrities, kids and animals alike. With over 600 films, shot in 15 countries to date, he is a veteran filmmaker, but is also the type of guy who loves shooting spots with a digital Bolex and a one man crew.

Robert Ader

After completing his studies of Business Administration in Aachen and Sydney, Robert Ader went on to work in the Marketing Communications Department at Porsche AG in 2001. Specializing in Strategy and E-Commerce, he soon became Regional Head of Sales Europe in 2007. He has been the Director Marketing Communications since 2012 and continues to support the PORSCHE AWARD.

porsche.com/germany/

Jo Marie Farwick

Jo Marie Farwick has been hip-hopping around the communication sector since 2003. You can put her in the box of the creative skyrocket scientist. For ad people it is very important to win a large number of creative awards, and that is exactly what she has done over the last few years. Starting with prizes such as ADC Germany/Europe/New York, LIAA, red dot & Cannes Lions (a few Gold, some Silver, and numerous Bronze in Print, Film and Copy), she went on to win more digital awards such as the NY Festival Interactive, Clio Interactive and Titanium Integrated in Cannes. This all came about because she developed from a more classical creative to a hybrid creative thinking holistically when it comes to brands. She invented the job title Hybrid Creative Director, which is now adopted by many others in the business.

In September 2015 Jo Marie founded Überground, a holistic idea collective with a totally new approach to working on eyelevel with clients on prestigious projects. Überground debuted the well-known international campaign for famous fitness brand Freeletics, for which it won its first awards. For Christmas 2016 the team rocked the market with the 1000degree #SANTACLARA Christmas Campaign for Europe's biggest discounter Lidl. It replaced Santa Claus, entered all the main European charts, and was named the best and most-shared XMAS Viral 2016.

On 23 February Jo Marie's company Überground was honoured with the Dare Greatly Award from Cadillac Europe and the title Rookie Agency of the Year 2016.

She is a member of the German Art Director's Club and was a teacher at Miami Ad School for 5 years. She is now a trusted "Kapitän" and is responsible for the curriculum at Texterschmiede, the most awarded German copywriting school.

Daniel Bergmann

Daniel Bergmann hails from Prague, where he helped to establish the production company Stillking Production, now Stillking Films Group, and 20/20, and worked as a partner and executive producer on numerous commercials, music videos, shorts and films.

Daniel is the founder and President of London-based international production company Stink. One of the first and with a global outlook, Daniel has made it Stink's mission to find and nurture local and international talent and to work directly with the most creative people producing fresh, exciting, progressive and original projects, commercials, music videos and branded experiences. With offices in Berlin, Paris, Shanghai, Moscow, Sao Paulo, New York and Los Angeles, Stink represents an eclectic roster of directors around the world, and remains at the cutting edge of advertising production, always expanding into new creative areas and proactively looking for new challenges.

Nova Meierhenrich, Actress, Germany

Be it the big stage of a show on a Saturday evening, the paddock of the Formula 1, the live-atmosphere of big festivals or the red carpet at the Academy Awards, Grammy & Golden Globe: Nova Meierhenrich is a full-on professional in all the areas of moderation. Since her TV-debut in 1996 she hosted over a hundred different shows in German television, each on a regular basis, and moderated countless events. Being one of the pioneers of internet television, she has a faible for new media and keeps constantly challenging herself in new areas. Her open, charming and kind personality is an enrichment to any event and she has a way of combining both spontaneity and professionalism in an entertaining way.

Her degrees in communication studies, psychology and sociology provide Nova Meierhenrich with a profound journalistic background, enabling her to supervise projects from both behind the camera and on stage, as well as editorial. Since January 2014 she moderates the Saturday-evening-talkshow „Ducks & Friends“ for the Disney Channel, looking behind the scenes of some of the biggest film-productions worldwide.

Nova Meierhenrich is also a successful actress present in both cinema and television. Not only did she play the main role for the series „Herzflimmern – Die Klinik am See“, her work as an actress also includes TV-Productions like „Sind denn alle Männer Schweine?“ (for SAT.1), „SOKO“ (for ZDF), „In aller Freundschaft“ (for ARD) or cine-films like „Unter Bauern – Retter in der Nacht“, making her one of the big names of German television.

The productions she participated in reach from telenovelas and dramas all the way to detective stories. All but a neophyte in the field of advertising, she worked for various advertising agencies, first and foremost the BBDO.

When her growing fame then enabled her to actively advertise for certain companies herself, she became the brand-ambassador for the cosmetics-brand „Sans Soucis“ and the face of an advertising campaign for „Venus Divine“.

After a racy career in film and television she started to focus on carefully selected projects and movies while remaining her professional and well-informed self - without ever losing the joy and passion for this line of work. She also invests a great deal of her time in charity, mainly for her own non-profit association „HerzPiraten“ which benefits cardiac children. (<http://herzpiraten.com/>)
